SUMMARY

Craigowen Lodge was built as a gate lodge to Craigavad House, now the Royal Belfast Golf Club comprising of a single storey three bay Italianate lodge designed by Thomas Turner and built 1851. Most architectural detailing has survived and the sculpted masonry and carved timber are of superior quality and craftsmanship. The lodge remains an fine example of its type and of the work of Turner.

The property is located on the north side of the Bangor Road, Craigavad and is in need or complete refurbishment. The building has a B1 Listed Status from 1988.
