A Wildlife Haven to Call Home

Nestled in a peaceful rural setting, 54B Ballycreely Road is a charming detached stone cottage that perfectly combines character, comfort and an exceptional connection with nature. Surrounded by beautifully established grounds, this unique home offers a rare opportunity to enjoy country living while remaining within easy reach of Comber, Newtownards and Belfast.

The property retains much of its original cottage charm, with exposed beams, thick stone walls and a warm, welcoming atmosphere throughout. Internally, the accommodation comprises a bright living room overlooking the gardens, a separate dining room ideal for family gatherings, a fitted country-style kitchen, three well-proportioned bedrooms and a beautifully appointed shower room. Thoughtful upgrades have enhanced the home while preserving its traditional appeal.

A particular feature of the property is the stunning wildlife garden. Lovingly created over many years, the grounds provide a haven for birds, pollinators and local wildlife, with mature trees, native planting, wildflower areas, productive vegetable beds and a variety of peaceful seating areas from which to enjoy the changing seasons. The gardens offer both beauty and biodiversity, creating a tranquil outdoor environment rarely found in today's market.

The generous site also benefits from extensive gravel parking, useful outbuildings and former stable buildings currently utilised for storage, workshop and gym facilities, providing excellent flexibility for a range of lifestyle requirements.

Whether you're seeking a character-filled family home, a countryside retreat or a property with space to pursue gardening, self-sufficiency and outdoor interests, 54B Ballycreely Road delivers a truly special package. Combining rural charm, mature wildlife-friendly gardens and versatile outbuildings, this delightful stone cottage offers a lifestyle opportunity as much as a home.
